Stay Alert – Watch Out For New Ransomware Threats

What's super scary and super cool all at the same time?

Hangin' With A Hammerhead Shark

FREE Featured Apps – These Three Are Well Worth A Look

The arrival of 2018 is the perfect opportunity to change some of the habits that gadgets and services have helped foster over recent years. Here's what you can try to do this year, to help protect your personal data.

Protect yourself from cybercrime

Cybercrime is an enormous issue, and recent reports have shown that huge numbers of people are still not taking online security seriously, leaving them vulnerable to hackers.

The easiest thing you can do to protect yourself is use different passwords for the different sites and services you use. This way, if a criminal was to break into one of your accounts, they would not have access to all your information, and you could easily reset your password.

Electronic devices such as phones and laptops emit blue light, which can trick your brain into thinking it's nighttime, affecting your sleep. The impact they can have on sleep, but the best thing you can do to protect yourself is stop using your phone before bedtime.

You're always going to be tempted to check it, even if you're mid-conversation or trying to concentrate. One of the worst things about smartphones is their knack of distracting you from things you're doing.

Use Airplane mode more often

Delete the apps from your phone and instead use the social networks exclusively. There are basic steps you can take to help you use them less if you don't quite feel up to it.

One of the reasons why smartphones are so addictive is because they have push notification features that send you alerts whenever someone messages you. This can be a great way to stay in touch, but it can also be a huge distraction.

Deleting the apps from your phone and instead using the social networks exclusively is a great way to cut down on impulse buys and save money.

Purchases without a second thought

You're going to be tempted to check it, even if you're mid-conversation or trying to concentrate. One of the worst things about smartphones is their knack of distracting you from things you're doing.

To ensure that you continue receiving our emails, please add us to your address book or safe list.

To ensure that you continue receiving our emails, please add us to your address book or safe list.

You haven't started pinning on Pinterest yet and you want to get started? If so, here's what you can try to do this year, to help protect your personal data.

The easiest thing you can do to protect yourself is use different passwords for the different sites and services you use. This way, if a criminal was to break into one of your accounts, they would not have access to all your information, and you could easily reset your password.

Electronic devices such as phones and laptops emit blue light, which can trick your brain into thinking it's nighttime, affecting your sleep. The impact they can have on sleep, but the best thing you can do to protect yourself is stop using your phone before bedtime.

You're always going to be tempted to check it, even if you're mid-conversation or trying to concentrate. One of the worst things about smartphones is their knack of distracting you from things you're doing.

Use Airplane mode more often

Delete the apps from your phone and instead use the social networks exclusively. There are basic steps you can take to help you use them less if you don't quite feel up to it.

One of the reasons why smartphones are so addictive is because they have push notification features that send you alerts whenever someone messages you. This can be a great way to stay in touch, but it can also be a huge distraction.

Deleting the apps from your phone and instead using the social networks exclusively is a great way to cut down on impulse buys and save money.

Purchases without a second thought

You're going to be tempted to check it, even if you're mid-conversation or trying to concentrate. One of the worst things about smartphones is their knack of distracting you from things you're doing.

To ensure that you continue receiving our emails, please add us to your address book or safe list.

To ensure that you continue receiving our emails, please add us to your address book or safe list.

You haven't started pinning on Pinterest yet and you want to get started? If so, here's what you can try to do this year, to help protect your personal data.

The easiest thing you can do to protect yourself is use different passwords for the different sites and services you use. This way, if a criminal was to break into one of your accounts, they would not have access to all your information, and you could easily reset your password.

Electronic devices such as phones and laptops emit blue light, which can trick your brain into thinking it's nighttime, affecting your sleep. The impact they can have on sleep, but the best thing you can do to protect yourself is stop using your phone before bedtime.

You're always going to be tempted to check it, even if you're mid-conversation or trying to concentrate. One of the worst things about smartphones is their knack of distracting you from things you're doing.

Use Airplane mode more often

Delete the apps from your phone and instead use the social networks exclusively. There are basic steps you can take to help you use them less if you don't quite feel up to it.

One of the reasons why smartphones are so addictive is because they have push notification features that send you alerts whenever someone messages you. This can be a great way to stay in touch, but it can also be a huge distraction.

Deleting the apps from your phone and instead using the social networks exclusively is a great way to cut down on impulse buys and save money.

Purchases without a second thought

You're going to be tempted to check it, even if you're mid-conversation or trying to concentrate. One of the worst things about smartphones is their knack of distracting you from things you're doing.

To ensure that you continue receiving our emails, please add us to your address book or safe list.

To ensure that you continue receiving our emails, please add us to your address book or safe list.

You haven't started pinning on Pinterest yet and you want to get started? If so, here's what you can try to do this year, to help protect your personal data.

The easiest thing you can do to protect yourself is use different passwords for the different sites and services you use. This way, if a criminal was to break into one of your accounts, they would not have access to all your information, and you could easily reset your password.

Electronic devices such as phones and laptops emit blue light, which can trick your brain into thinking it's nighttime, affecting your sleep. The impact they can have on sleep, but the best thing you can do to protect yourself is stop using your phone before bedtime.

You're always going to be tempted to check it, even if you're mid-conversation or trying to concentrate. One of the worst things about smartphones is their knack of distracting you from things you're doing.

Use Airplane mode more often

Delete the apps from your phone and instead use the social networks exclusively. There are basic steps you can take to help you use them less if you don't quite feel up to it.

One of the reasons why smartphones are so addictive is because they have push notification features that send you alerts whenever someone messages you. This can be a great way to stay in touch, but it can also be a huge distraction.

Deleting the apps from your phone and instead using the social networks exclusively is a great way to cut down on impulse buys and save money.